Joe's Kansas City Bar-B-Que Cookbook

Synopsis

The long awaited, first cookbook from one of this most successful barbecue joints in the country, Joe's Kansas City Bar-B-Que. In Kansas City, where barbecue is a way of life, it is understood that smoke has mystical properties. Smoke has the power to transform the ordinary into the extraordinary. It can transform the least desirable cuts of meat into the most delectable. It can even transform a neighborhood corner gas station into one of the most popular restaurants on the planet. Step inside the world of some of the best barbecue in the country. Author and owner, Jeff Stehney, attended his first barbecue competition in 1990 and he was hooked. He asked a few friends to form a competition team, Slaughterhouse Five, that would go on to win many of the most prestigious competitions across the country over the next several years. Jeff decided to take it one step further and went into business with Joe Don Davidson and the first Oklahoma Joe's opened in Stillwater, Oklahoma in 1996. Their second location, an iconic gas station in Kansas City, opened because it was located close to Jeff and Joy's home. In 1997 Jeff and Joy became the sole owners and developed Joe's into one of the most successful restaurants in the country. With three locations in Kansas, you can't go to Joe's without expecting to stand in line; It is always worth the wait. For the first time, their storied history and 65 of their famous Joe's recipes are captured in one fantastic book. Their barbecue is nothing short of perfection, everytime. As Jeff recalls, "I'm reminded of the importance of what we do here, and our role in Kansas City's barbecue tradition, every morning when I arrive at the restaurant and smell that wonderful smoke coming out of our smokers. After all these years, it's still magical." •

Customer Reviews

"Consistently ranked among the nation's top BBQ joints, this smokehouse epitomizes the Kansas City style: slow-smoked meats slathered in a thick, sweet, tomato-and-molasses-based sauce." (Emily Saladino and Lauren Rothman, New York Post)

Jeff Stehney is the president and co-founder of Joeâ™s Kansas City Bar-B-Que.â Jeff first began competing in barbecue contests with his wife Joy in 1990. In the years since, the Stehneysâ™ team, Slaughterhouse Five has won nearly thirty Grand and Reserve Grand Championships in contests sanctioned by the Kansas City Barbeque Society, including the American Royal Invitational and Open. In 1993, Slaughterhouse Five won the Kansas City Barbeque Society Team of The Year. Encouraged by their success in competition barbecue, Jeff & Joy opened their first restaurant in 1996, in the gas station at the corner of 47th & Mission, in Kansas City, Kansas. Theyâ™ve opened two additional restaurants since. Joeâ™s Kansas City Bar-B-Que has been Zagatâ™s highest rated Kansas City barbecue establishment every year since 2004. USA Todayâ™s Readers of USA Today voted Joeâ™s Kansas City Bar-B-Queâ™s "Best Southern BBQ" in a nationwide poll in May 2015. In 2015, the Kansas City, Kansas, Convention and Visitors Bureau named Joeâ™s Kansas City Bar-B-Que its Organization of the Year.â Doug Worgul is a writer, editor, and marketing executive based in Kansas City. He is the author of two previous work of non-fiction; A Table Full of Welcome: A cookbook celebrating the ethnic diversity of Kansas Cityâ™s culinary traditions and The Grand Barbecue: A celebration of the history, places, people, and techniques of Kansas City barbecue. His critically-acclaimed novel, Thin Blue Smoke, was published in the U.K. by Macmillan in 2009 and in the U.S. by Conundrum Press in 2012. A nationally-recognized authority on the history and cultural significance of American barbecue traditions, Worgul is currently director of marketing at Joeâ™s Kansas City Bar-B-Que in Kansas City.â
